I Do, But Where?

Step one in planning your reception is to select and book your venue. Your reception is generally the most expensive aspect of your wedding and where you choose to have it sets the entire tone for your special day. In addition to the reception location being a significant indicator of the style of wedding you are planning, it also affects many other factors, including the food, the labor requirements and the over-all cost of your wedding. Learning as much as possible about your venue options will make your decision process an easier one and we've got incredible Triad locations from which to choose.

Greensboro Country Club

The Greensboro Country Club is celebrating 100 years of excellence in 2009. The club recognizes that our members and their guests have individual tastes and needs that require the staff's personal care. Weddings at the club are handled with impeccable service and attention to every detail. The club offers many options to include cocktail receptions up to 500, elegant seated dinners for 300, in addition to engagement parties, bridal luncheons and rehearsal dinners. The club's menu selections have been designed to capture the club's traditional history as well as new contemporary cuisine. However, if a member or guest desires something different, the club's Executive Chef, Scott

Pisula, and his culinary staff will custom tailor a menu specifically to meet each individual's tastes.

A wedding is a time to celebrate with our members, their family and friends. The club prides itself under the direction of J. Scott Harmon, Catering Sales Director, to produce events that are professionally executed and seamless from start to finish. The club's newly renovated Ballroom offers many options for our brides to design their dream wedding. We welcome our members and their guests to host a wedding event at the club and create everlasting memories that will last a lifetime.
